

A.R.E./Glad Helpers' International Prayer List

APRIL 2026

Dear Prayer and Healing Friends,

In reading 5749-6 given on April 5, 1936, Mr. Cayce turns our attention from the outer drama of the Crucifixion to the inner, living presence of the Christ within. As we approach Easter, let's think of this occasion not only as a remembrance of a historical resurrection but as a present, personal awakening. These words invite us to claim Christ's promises in our own consciousness, day by day.

"Crucify Him not in thy mind nor in thy bodily activities. Be not overcome by those things that are of the earth-earthy. Rather clothe thy body, thy mind, with the thoughts, the deeds, the privileges that His suffering as a man brought to thee, that He indeed might be the first of those that slept, the first of those that came in the flesh, that passed through all those periods of preparation in the flesh, even as thou. But if ye would put on Him, ye must claim His promises as thine own. And how canst thou claim them unless ye in thine own knowledge, thine own consciousness, HAVE done—do do from day to day—that thy heart has told and does tell thee is in keeping with what He has promised? For thy Christ, thy Lord, thy Jesus, is nigh unto thee—just now!"

Prayer: A Pathway to Peace—Part 8 Savanna Barbarian

In Work reading 254-35, given on June 4, 1927, Mr. Cayce describes not just the formation of an organization, but the quiet birth of a spiritual instrument for peace. The Association of National Investigators (the precursor to the A.R.E.) was affirmed as rightly and legally formed, with trustees properly set in place. "There are some whose names appear that are not, as yet, wholly in accord with the work being attempted. These should not be discarded, but rather disregarded, until such a time that they—through the exercising of those forces as have been set in motion—are in accord with the work being attempted." In other words, sometimes we have to wait for them to grow into their role.

Rather than a criticism, this is a spiritual forecast—through practice and grace, they will grow into what the Work requires. The Association itself becomes a school of the soul. At the heart of this unfolding stands the hospital. It is not merely a building, but a living channel through which healing, compassion, and higher influence can touch everyday lives. The question of who carries this work forward, and how, is central. Their inner quality will determine whether peace is something they talk about, or something they transmit. Mr. Cayce also warns that the work will attract both sincere interest and ridicule, just as in Noah's day. ". . . for many will be interested—many will laugh at such endeavors; yet same was true even when Noah was called into the ark."

The heart of the Association is not measured by public opinion, but by how gently and sincerely it stays true to its calling. Its purpose is essentially philanthropic:

April 2026 Affirmation

"Our Father...though...troubled in body...in mind, may we realize...as peace comes to our souls and...minds may we find relief from...turmoils...Let us seek... Thy presence...Help, O God, our unbelief!"

Edgar Cayce reading 281-65

The Edgar Cayce readings emphasize the importance that those who are seeking help and healing through prayer actively participate in the prayer effort—praying for themselves and others on the list. This creates a cooperative, unified prayer effort. In the giving comes receiving.

AS HELP IS RECEIVED, REMEMBER TO THANK GOD, THE GIVER OF ALL GOOD AND PERFECT GIFTS.

We will pray for you, as the channel, as you pray for those on your personal prayer list, which is what Mr. Cayce instructed members of the original Prayer Group to do. Thank you for your understanding and assistance.

an expression of caring service, rather than a way to seek personal advantage. In this spirit of quiet unselfishness lies its deepest possibility, to be a steady, healing presence for peace in a troubled world.

The central question, then, is not about size, numbers, or outward success, but whether the Association is moving in harmony with the original intent and purpose of the work. Structures and categories can be useful, but they remain secondary. What matters most is whether the tone, attitude, and life of the organization reflect the same spirit as the readings themselves. In this sense, peace is not something added later, but a natural outgrowth of a loving and well-centered purpose.

Membership is not a mark of status, but a gentle affirmation of shared intention and cooperation. To become a member is to say: I feel drawn to the ideal behind this work; I am grateful to share in its blessings, and I am willing to share in its responsibilities, so that together we may nurture greater peace and understanding in the world.

For that reason, the Association is not meant to be a personality cult around Mr. Cayce, nor a club of psychic curiosity-seekers, nor a money-driven enterprise. It is intended as an instrument for the spiritual application of the readings: to live their spiritual ideals, not just talk about them. It exists as a channel through which individuals may cooperate in bringing the work to others and, across lifetimes, reconnect with a shared purpose of service. When an organization is structured around lived ideals rather than personalities or profit, it becomes a potential center of peace: a place where souls learn to harmonize their will with a higher pattern.

Beneath all the administrative questions, this reading returns to a single point: What is the spirit of this Association? Does it embody the same spirit as the readings: service, cooperation, and a living commitment to the ideal of oneness with God and each other? Where that spirit is present, an Association can become a living field of peace. Where it is absent, even the most efficient structure remains spiritually empty. At the end of the reading, it calls for an Association whose very organization is a practice of peace: alignment with purpose, cooperation in spirit, and a shared willingness to be inwardly transformed by the ideals we claim to serve. Heartfelt appreciation from us to those of you living this good Work.
